Man Survives Terrible Ordeal

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Manuel Ramirez, 28, the former Chicago stockyard worker who survived 5 1/2 days in a refrigerated boxcar without food or water, will return to his Laredo, Tex., home in about 10 days.

Joseph T. Reddy, Villanova, Pa., an engineering firm owner, offered to pay Ramirez fare back to his Texas home. Officials of Episcopal Hospital said Ramirez will be released in about 10 days after treatment for malnutrition and dehydration suffered in his ordeal.

Ramirez was found in the refrigerated boxcar when it arrived here from Chicago. Railroad workers at first thought him dead but he opened his eyes as patrolmen were about to take him to a morgue.

He explained from his hospital bed that he had climbed into the boxcar loaded with sheepskins in Chicago, thinking it would take him to Texas. He had decided to return home after losing his stockyard job. While he hid among the hides, a railroad employee seized the car and the temperature fell to about 50 degrees as the train started its journey to Philadelphia.

Attaches Expelled From Russia, Report

LONDON (AP) — Private advisers received here today said three assistant U. S. military attaches have been expelled from Russia.

The reports received here said all three were declared persona non grata and left the Soviet capital about two weeks ago.

The three ousted Americans were identified as Lt. Col. John S. Benson, Capt. Walter Mule and Capt. William E. Stroud. All are Army men. Their home addresses were not available in London.

Benson, until about a year ago, was assistant intelligence officer for the 1st Army, Fort Jay, N. Y.

It was understood here that the incident was hushed up at the time on grounds the U. S. State Department felt publication would not be in the national interest.

Peron's charges of "treason" against the church, roamed the streets. As soon as the violence began, angry Catholics also swarmed through the streets shouting such slogans as, "Long Live Christ the King!"

HOUSTON, Tex., June 17 (AP) — Hedy Lamarr had back today the $30,000 worth of jewelry that she reported had been stolen from her and caused all her household to take lie detector tests.

The climax of the jewelry theft from the home of the former movie actress and her husband, oil millionaire Howard Lee, came suddenly.

"You can say that the jewels were recovered" on the premises at 5:30 p.m. yesterday," Lee told reporters. "Other than that we have nothing more to say at this time."

However, detective H. B. Short quoted Lee as saying that Miss Lamarr's seamstress, Alberta Pears, found the jewels in a bag on a shelf in the upstairs sewing room of the Lee home.

Short who investigated when the jewels were reported stolen, said that Lee was asked if either he or Miss Lamarr had a suspect following the recovery. Short said they did not.

Casualties Heavy In Capital City; Churches Are Burned

By WILLIAM L. F. HORSEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, June 17 (AP) — The official Argentine radio said early today complete calm reigned throughout Argentina and that a revolution against President Juan D. Peron was crushed with heavy loss of life.

A United Press dispatch reaching Santiago, Chile, said 156 persons were killed in the revolt, 90 persons critically injured and about 800 persons less severely injured.

Dispatches reaching Santiago said at least seven Roman Catholic churches had been put to the torch by Peron supporters in the heart of Buenos Aires and that the residence of Santiago Cardinal Copello was burned.

Montevideo, Uruguay dispatches said the unusual timing of the government broadcast — 8:20 a.m. and then hourly throughout the night — indicated some fighting continued. Many rebels fled to Uruguay by plane and ship.

The sprawling Argentine capital with a population of 3-million was reported paralyzed with all shops and businesses closed and transportation at a standstill. Heavily armed government forces sealed off Buenos Aires from the rest of the nation.

The nation has been in a "state of internal war" since 1951 when Peron put down an army-navy revolt led by Gen. Benjamin Menendez. Then, too, the chief plotters were naval officers.

The pro-government General Confederation of Labor CGT called a general strike of mourning to last until midnight. Many armed members of the CGT swarmed to the center of Buenos Aires Thursday to help the government.

Navy Shells Buenos Aires

The revolt began when navy rebels bombed and shelled the heart of Buenos Aires and battled their way into Government House. The revolt was halted with the arrest of its leaders. Those continuing to resist will be destroyed, he said.

The navy men, supported by jet planes and warships, surged into Government House at midday in a bold attempt to wrest the government from Peron.

Argentine rebels reaching Uruguay said officers of the three armed services planned the revolt for three years and had seized on the turmoil created by Peron's campaign against the church to rise against the government.

They said weather caused it to fail. "For a moment, the center of the city when they tried to bomb the government into submission and a sudden storm on the River La Plata halted the landing of an amphibious force of marines."

It appeared for a while the rebels might win their goal. They seized an airfield, set up headquarters in the Navy Ministry and unloaded strikes of mourning to men, palace. Rebel planes strafed the crowds of Peron supporters on the streets, inflicting heavy casualties. Two warships fired shells into the government area.

Rebels shelled said insurgent troops captured all of their assigned objectives but had to fall back when amphibious reinforcements failed to arrive.

The army remained loyal to the government, and prompt counterattacks crushed the revolt. Immediately afterwards a group of high army officers presented Peron with a copy of the "Ten Commandments of the Argentine Soldier" in token of their loyalty.

Peron said the rebel high command had surrendered and the leaders were under arrest. He said there would be no reprisals and that the worst punishment would be the memory of their actions. But he warned remaining revolutionists to put down their arms immediately or face destruction.

SUMMIT, N. J. (AP) — A secret weight-reducing formula from the Australian bush country was ancient Archie Moore's greatest weapon today as he trained for "my biggest gamble."

The 38-year-old light heavyweight champion isn't revealing the sum total of his avoidances as he prepares for a June 22 title defense against Carl Bobo Olson. But he does believe he'll make the 175-pound limit because of a weight-pairing system he learned from an Australian aborigine.

"All of which is part of his master plan to flatten Bobo and prove his right to a heavyweight title go against Rocky Marciano. Archie as part of the buildup, is making a great mystery of his weight as, complete with moustache and Van Dyke, he goes through his paces at his training camp.

The only other mystery, connection with this bout, is whether Archie can drop down from 196 to 175 and retain his strength and effectiveness against the cagey and rugged Bobo.

Financial Reason

"This secret system of mine, which I learned from an Australian aborigine when I fought there in 1940, will do the trick," Archie explained almost placidly. "But I have to keep it secret."

The reason is financial.

After he beats Bobo — and, from his confidence it is to be supposed — and then wins the heavyweight crown from Marciano, Archie is going to give his secret to the world. For a price. He'll write a book on his weight reducing method.

In the interim he isn't telling anybody anything.

"Why should I let Olson know how much I weigh, whether I'm having any trouble, or whether I'm not?" Archie explained. "Let him guess. That way, I'm not helping him any."

The bout, to be held at New York's Polo Grounds, definitely is a gamble for Moore. He has been clamoring for a shot at Marciano for a long time and losing to Olson the middleweight champion, would reveal his claims as slightly preposterous.

"Any fight is a gamble," Archie admitted as he prepared for a three-round workout while wearing a fancy nylon shirt, a white sweat shirt with ragged sleeves and gray sweat pants. "This one is my knock out Olson," he finished flatly. Certainly he didn't have the appearance of a 38-year-old who has had more than 170 bouts in a 20-year career as he went three fast rounds. Archie was up on his toes and, indicative of what Olson can expect, was evading and countering beautifully, meanwhile constantly spinning his sparmate into the ropes.

So the question of whether he can pare off 21 pounds without losing his snap remains to be settled.

But Bobo, you'd better be ready because old Arch looks to be about 183 right now, fast as a whippet and throwing bombs. The aborigine never had it so good.

The marriage of Miss Modelle Hendrick and Mr. Claude Miller of this city was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Hendrick, June the eleventh at 6 p.m.

Atty. and Mrs. Hall Hood and children left last Friday morning to drive to Ringgold, Louisiana. The children will visit with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, while Mr. and Mrs. Hood attend the convention of Rotary International in Mexico City.

The fifteenth annual singing will be held here the fourth Sunday in June, the 23rd, at the Calloway County courthouse. A record crowd is expected to attend this year.

Noting from Gettysburg:

The President insists on retaining the ancient, rusty and creaking windmill on his farm. He says it reminds him of his boyhood.

At last count there were 21 ducks on the Eisenhower pond, these are not to be confused with the two mallards that took up temporary residence in the White House fountain. There would have been more ducks on the farm this spring if it had not been for marauding racoons which ate the duck eggs.

Secret Service guard booths around the farm house look like sidewalk telephone booths. The framework of each booth is painted a brilliant green, but most of the booths consist largely of glass panels to give the agents warmth at night and freedom of vision in all directions.

THE DUCKOLOGICAL

The following report from Duck Unlimited in Canada is given for the benefit of you duck hunters. From all indications, duck hunting will be much better in 55-56 than in 54-55.

NESTING SEASON

PROGRESSES FAVORABLY

The waterfowl breeding season is developing favorably in all parts of the range in the prairie provinces. The first Pintail broods were seen on May 18-22 in southwestern Saskatchewan and were common by May 27th; in southern Alberta on May 28th; and Mallards (11) in eastern Saskatchewan on May 25th; Pintail (6), Blue-winged teal (10) in Manitoba May 31.

Surface water conditions are generally high — too high in some parts of Saskatchewan and Manitoba but little or no flooding loss is reported as the waters were high when the birds returned and they are nesting on high ground. Heavy precipitation in southern Alberta in May eliminated an incipient drought threat in that area except for a small area in the south east from Hanna south to the Bow River and east to the Saskatchewan border.

Indications are that clutches are large and the first nesting attempts should be highly successful. Spring farming operations have been so delayed that there will be very little loss to cultivation. It is not expected that flood losses have been high as most areas were at high levels at the start of the season. Nowhere is drought loss a threat with most areas having enough water now to insure sufficient carry over for the 1956 season.

Impassable roads have prevented running the transects north of the Trans-Canada highway. However, despite the great increase in water areas, one gets the impression that waterfowl are much more numerous. Transects run to date south of the Trans-Canada highway indicate a breeding pair of Mallards about the size of 1954. The first brood of Mallard (11 ducklings) was noted on May 25. The breeding season is one to two weeks earlier than 1954. Drought will have no effect this year.

I think we are in for a bang-up waterfowl year." (From Biologist Tom Sterling's report covering eastern Saskatchewan.)

Manitoba: Water conditions are generally excellent with flood conditions prevailing on the marshes adjacent to the large lakes and along the Assiniboine River Valley. The Assiniboine has flooded about 100,000 acres of farmlands about 20 miles west of Winnipeg and most of this water will remain throughout the season. Good duck population is present on this water and in the marshes adjacent to Lakes Win-

FIELD STRIP THOSE BUTTS

Every one needs to become acutely aware of the necessity of remembering that from this time of the year on, we need to be on the alert to prevent forest and woods fires. On fishing trips while surveying a stretch of timber to locate den trees, etc., and then when the hunting season opens.

The safest way to assure oneself that he will not be the source of a costly and damaging woods fire is to break every match that is struck into two pieces, field strip a cigarette or cigar before throwing it away, bury pipe ashes and soak camp fires. If you hold a match until you presume it is out, then break it into two pieces you will know that there is no dangerous spark, else wind up with a slightly scorched finger.

Field stripping a cigarette or cigar serves two purposes; it assures the smoker that his weed is out and will not be smoldering dangerously after he is a quarter mile further on, and it will also leave the area looking not so "civilized" and messy. To field strip a cigarette roll it between your thumb and forefinger until all the tobacco is loose and the paper breaks, then scatter the tobacco and roll the paper into a tiny ball before tossing it aside.

About the only way to take out insurance on a pipe full of red hot ashes is to bury them, the ashes, not the pipe. Bake aside the leaves with your foot, dig your heel into the ground two or three inches, and dump the hot pipe contents into the hole and cover them up with your hand then press the earth down with your shoe. All camp fires should be soaked thoroughly with water before leaving them.

These simple precautions when taken do not require much time, but will leave a lot more forest and woods in hunting condition and streams full of fish than is left at the end of most years.

Observe these yourself, and encourage your friends and fellow club members to heed self habits for self and others sake.

Liberace

In Motion Picture

By ALINE MOSBY

United Press Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (U) — Liberace is making his debut as a movie star in his first straight dramatic role—minus his candelabra and brother George. But there will be dancing and expressions ranging from "Shock to tears."

In case you've missed the poorly-toothed television matinee idol on the home screens, Warner Studio is presenting him to the world—as an actor in big screen color and stereophonic sound.

"I'm stepping out of character for the first time and people are curious to see how I meet the challenge," Liberace said between scenes today.

Yesterday I did a very difficult scene in which we had to show shock, panic and sadness, in that order. Why, I got so worked up," he smiled, "that as I came off the set I still was crying."

Previously the pianist did only a bit on a Shelly Winters movie, "South Sea Sinners," and performed in two RKO musical shorts.

After he became the hottest thing on TV since old movies, Warner's waved a contract under his nose. The rich Liberace decided to become richer "because movies will be a wonderful way to get to still a greater audience than I reach on TV-Europe."

His movie, "Sincerely Yours," is a story about a musician who goes deaf and, while recovering, influences the lives of persons who pass by his window. The plot sounds suspiciously like an earlier Warner epic starring George Arliss, "The Man Who Played God."

Still Has Smile

"Sincerely Yours" will be but the first film in Liberace's new career as a movie actor. He has, however, nipeg, Winnipegosis, Manitoba and Oak. Conversely, there are relatively small areas of pothole country in south-western Manitoba which will require normal rains in June and July to keep them functioning. Transects completed to date indicate a sizeable reduction in breeding pairs but this may be more apparent than real as the birds have the best flooded areas which were not present last year.

All in all, the three prairie provinces promise to turn out a duck crop comparable to the outstanding 1952 season.

Indications are that clutches are large and the first nesting attempts should be highly successful. Spring farming operations have been so delayed that there will be very little loss to cultivation. HERE ARE the sad scenes as former ballet dancer Lenora Davis, 32, finally lost her fight of nearly a year to keep the Chicago sanitary district from razing her home to make room for a railroad spur. She had used afghan hounds and gunfire as protection, but when a war party of 12 assorted law authorities showed up, she was evicted and home burned. (Interval one Soundphotos)

THE BOSS of BROKEN SPUR

By Nick Summer

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

"WELL, RUSTY, you're on Broken Spur now."

"Mighty big country. Man could almost settle down here without feelin' boxed in."

Kerry looked around him, seeing every side something that brought back happy memories.

His thoughts ate up the miles till he found himself in sight of the main house. His heart plunged down as he wondered what sort of reception he could expect. After all, he had no grounds for being sure Rob would want him back after the way he'd left.

The living-room was empty when he entered it, but he caught a crack of light under the door of the office beyond. He hesitated a moment, then, in a burst of impatience at his own chicken-heartedness, banged his knuckles on the door.

"No need to wake the dead! Come in!"

Rob was working over the ranch books and didn't notice Kerry looking up at first. Kerry stood in the doorway, watching the handsome hawk-like profile, with his throat tight and his heart beating hard, till Rob raised his head and their eyes met and locked.

Kerry forced a smile to stiff lips, and flippancy into his voice.

"Well, Rob, the bad penny's turned up again."

"Hello, kid." Quietly, almost casually, Rob shut the big account book and got to his feet. Kerry remembered Rusty's presence in back of him, and was grateful for the introductions that gave him something to bridge over this moment. After one of his swift, stinging looks, to which Rusty returned his slow smile, Rob said abruptly, "Come on in the living-room. I expect you'd like something to wash the dust out of your throats." His hand touched Kerry's shoulder in a confiding, brief touch that might have been an accident.

"You know what's going on here?" he demanded over the drink.

"I met Sandy in Dodge. And a cowboy we ran into in Twin Forks told us about Larrabee getting shot and the fool way Tim was taking it. Anything happened since?"

"Not to say, happened. I've heard talk. I don't know how much of it to believe. They say Larrabee's trying to organize the nesters for some kind of move on Broken Spur—him and that Bible-spouting old fire-eater, Nate Cullen. I doubt if any of the rest of them have nerve enough to do more than talk, but you never can tell. You staying?"

"If you'll have me."

"Don't talk like a fool, son. This is your home, isn't it?" Kerry

swallowed a sudden, uncalled-for lump in his throat.

Rob's black eyes traveled on to Rusty, and rested on him inquiringly.

"Rusty wants a job," Kerry volunteered. "He's a top hand. Good with horses. He—"

"He can probably speak up for himself."

"I need a job all right," Rusty confirmed. "And I can earn my keep. Only thing is, Mr. Mallory—"

"Never mind the Mr. Just call me Rob. Everybody else does."

"All right, Rob. Thing is, I oughta tell you before you turn me, I'm wanted for a klan baka on Dodge—only I didn't do it."

"That's all right. Rob moved his shoulders impatiently. "I may be wanted for a couple of killings myself before this business is over. You understand you might be buying into trouble?"

"You saw Kerry, Mr. Rob, he'll tell you trouble's sorta what you might call my natural element. Reckon it's no use a man tryin' to dodge what he's born to."

Rob nodded briefly. "Wages are forty a month—sixty if we run into shooting. You can show him where to bunk, Kerry. You'll start in the morning, patrolling the south range. That," he added with a wry smile, "is where your natural element is likely to start breaking, if it breaks. And Kerry, you might ride over to Slash I tomorrow. Old Jared's been pretty sick. I haven't had time to ride over and inquire, and I'd like to know how he is."

"I'll do that," Kerry grinned. "I'd kind of like to know myself. Life was suddenly looking better than it had in a long time."

Kerry listened to the quick, clean tap-tap of Rusty's heels coming down the stairs, his heart beating in the same tempo. His eyes caught the swirl of her blue skirt, the little curves of her body under the sheath of cloth. Then she was in full view, her face beneath the shining coils of hair a little paler and graver than he remembered it, but just lovely. One minute they stood like that; then she spoke his name, and her voice told him all he needed to know. Next minute she was clasped tight in his arms, and her lips were sending a wild sweetness through him that made him want to run to the top of the highest hill and shout his happiness to the four winds. All he could do was murmur, "Christie, Honey!" with his words unheeded against her cheek, and pull her closer till she gasped, "Kerry, don't break my bones." Then he let her go to arm's length, and they looked at each other again and laughed out of the fullness of feeling crowding up in them.

"Oh, Kerry, Kerry, you crazy fool! Why do I love you like I do?"

"Just so you do, I'll let you figure out why. I've missed you."

"I'll bet you have—not one letter, all this time."

"You know I'm no good at letters—and I wasn't even sure you'd want to hear from me. You were pretty mad at me when I went away, weren't you?"

"I reckon I was. I've been pretty mad the whole time you were away—mainly because you weren't around where I could have the satisfaction of telling you how mad I was!"

"Christie!" he urged. "Marry me—right now!"

"This minute?"

"Well, tomorrow—or the day after. I'll even wait to make a big fuss over it," he laughed, "unless, as he saw no denial in her eyes. "But I don't even want to let you get away from me again."

A sound from the room overhead brought a shadow over the brightness of her face. "Kerry, I want to believe me, I do—but I can't. I've got to stay with Dad—as long as I can." Her voice shook.

"Is it that bad, honey? I didn't know."

"Dad, Haller says a few weeks—maybe not that long."

Kerry put his arm around her, and she leaned against him.

They stood for a little while in a silence that had no need of words; then she said, "Come on up and say hello to Dad. And don't let on you notice how much he's changed."

Kerry needed the caution, for it gave him a profound shock to see if you want to make a big fuss over it," he laughed, "unless, as he saw no denial in her eyes. "But I don't even want to let you get away from me again."

BULLMOOSE ON WALL STREET

Can they do it? — Namely, make everybody turn green! —

The two most powerful men on earth have combined

General Washington Bullmoose, self-made billionaire. Inherited less than eighty million dollars, and quadrupled it, before he was twenty-one. After that, his financial rise was swift. Now controls the Bullmoose Company, which controls forty other companies, each of which controls so many other companies that, to put it in a word, he controls everything. His summer home is Fort Knox.

Fleegle ("Evil Eye") Fleegle, inherited the Evil Eye from a long line of vampires, werewolves, and frankensteins. He controls the Whammy, which in turn controls Brooklyn, which in turn controls the World. His summer home is Doherty Field.

These two colossal, being green, plan to turn the rest of the world green. Can humanity resist this combo?

ARGENTINES RALLY IN SUPPORT OF PERON

THOUSANDS OF ANTI-CLERIC demonstrators stream along the Avenida de Mayo in Buenos Aires in a mass demonstration to protest alleged Catholic "insults" to the Argentine flag and to show their support of separation of church and state. The rally is part of a work suspension called by the Argentine Labor in support of President Juan D. Peron. Dangling from a noose at extreme right of the banner is a dummy dressed as a cardinal. Legend on the banner reads, "Brothers, heart of Railroad 'Traumen Present.' The dummy was burned on steps of the Metropolitan cathedral of the city. (International Radiophoto)

East German Reds Polite To Adenauer

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent
The East German Communists are being very polite to West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer these days.

The newspapers in East German cities refer to him as "Herr Konrad Adenauer, chancellor of the Federal Republic."

Until recently, in the same newspapers, Adenauer was called "puppet," "war monger" and "imperialist lackey."

In fact, the Reds referred to Adenauer by these epithets as late as last Tuesday on their inside pages, that is, the first pages of the same editions—hastily revised—reported the fact that Adenauer had been invited to Moscow.

What happened, it developed, was that the Kremlin had failed to notify the East German government and the East German Communist Party in advance that their arch-enemy's favor was to be courted.

East Germans Worried

This means that the East German leaders have good reason to be worried.

They undoubtedly have, as companions in misery, the Polish Communists.

It was suggested three weeks before the Kremlin invitation to Moscow that the Polish Reds probably were a worried bunch of people.

They must be more worried today.

There can be no doubt that the Soviet government would let the East German Communists and the Polish Communists if necessary to make a deal with Adenauer.

That betrayal would involve the unification of Germany and the restoration to Germany of the more than 40,000 square miles of its eastern territory which Red Poland now occupies.

Russia has almost got to make some kind of agreement with Adenauer, if only a face-saving one, for its own good.

It is inconceivable that Adenauer would agree to make Germany a neutral nation, as the Kremlin desires.

Against Accepted Facts

Even if Adenauer did agree to such an incredible concept, the facts of life would prove too strong to permit its consummation.

Germany is a world power, as much of a world power as Russia is. It can not be relegated to the status of a minor nation.

As long as Adenauer is chancellor, its alignment with the West seems certain.

Wilhelm Pieck, Otto Grotewohl and Walter Ulbricht, the East German big three, must be thinking of these things with some bitterness today, while Adenauer is in Washington.

They are puppets and lackeys of the Kremlin while Adenauer is the head of a sovereign nation and the honored guest of President Eisenhower.

Pieck is the president of the so-called German Democratic Republic. He is a figurehead, Grotewohl, as premier, heads the government. Ulbricht, the most hated man in Germany, is the head of the Communist Party and the real boss.

Berlin advisers suggest that all three Red leaders may go to Moscow soon to find just what the outlook is. It seems hardly likely that any news they get will be good.

FISHING REPORT

Know Your Baits

By Ben Rovin

There were no entries in the Ledger and Times Fishing Contest this week. The recent rains and bad weather kept most fishermen off the lake, but those that had the nerve to get out generally came back to the docks with filled stringers.

Bill Nall, down at the Kenlake Boat Dock says that largemouth bass continue to be the better fishing this week with the average string being of medium size. Although stringers are still being taken in large numbers, they appear to be on a slight decline, as are crappie.

Bill tells of the following successful fishermen coming to his dock: N. T. Nuckols, Sr., N. T. Nuckols, Jr., and William Nuckols, all of Elkton, Kentucky. Nuckols, Jr. took two No. 6 treble hooks. Plastic body is a choice by "200" series Bombers. R. T. Durrett of Providence took his Bass limit on fly-rod poppers. Limit strings of large-mouth were taken on fly-rod poppers, by the following: Burble Knight, James Florence, Radford Connor, all of Hartin, Kentucky 1.

According to Nall the water in the lake is dingy, the temperature is 72 degrees and catfish and bass fishing seem to be the best bet.

The report from Fisherman's One Stop, across the lake at Egner's Ferry Bridge gives the following success stories:

Myles Hale, of Covington, caught 15 catfish and two eels fishing with worms from their baited fishing dock.

Laud Jordan used a bass buzz to take 5 largemouth and minnows to catch 5 catfish at the same dock. John Hugg, of Paducah caught 33 crappie weighing up to 2 pounds on minnows in 15-20 feet of water fishing at the bridge piers.

Jessie Farrer and Bill Gill, of St. Louis, caught 17 stripe bass on minnows fishing at the bridge piers. Woodrow Keeney, of Afton, Mo., fished the same piers with worms to take 4 catfish and 4 minnows. (Whatever they are).

Lee Sargent, of Evansville, caught 57 large mouth bass on a weeks fishing spree, most of them on Lucky 13's and Barton's spinner. Sargent fished around the bridge piers for his catch.

Gilbert Wintinger also of Evansville took 18 large mouth bass and stringers from along the shore near the Garcia Place on the lake.

A trio from Elkton, Ky., W.K. Settle, Col. W. S. Evans and C.E. Settle caught 18 large mouth bass fishing a Bomber along the banks.

Paul Gilliam, owner of Fisherman's One Stop says that "all fish have been very cooperative this week whenever the weather would permit the fishermen to get out. Rain and wind have been in effect most of the week. First May fly swarm came Thursday night and allowed us to really slay fish of all kinds."

To back up his statement the report contains the fact that Gilliam and his wife caught 30 bass, 30 stripes and 22 catfish and carp right off their dock while fishing with live May Flies.

Calton Morgan and Elbert Massey fished last Tuesday for stripes around the islands off Bailey Creek and got into several jumps. They used red and white spoons and Baby Pants Jigs to take their limit apiece of stripe bass.

Morgan said that they did not leave the store until 4:30 and they had had more time. The limit of one species of fish is enough for any man any day, else should be.

Most consider themselves lucky if they catch three or four fish in so short a time.

Remember to enter the fish you catch in the Big Ledger and Times Fishing Contest. You may be lucky in more ways than one.

Got Sales Cut

Osborn started "Space Patrol" fresh from dramatic school, and quickly rose to fame. He received a cut of "Space Patrol" space suits, helmets, ray guns and other items sold to kiddies.

"But the merchandising business is gone," he said.

He was a star of outer space for five years on TV and four on radio. Film stars begged for his autograph, children trailed him down the street.

JOSHUA KEEPS THE PASSOVER

The Passover was the most significant and meaningful of all the feasts or religious celebrations of God's chosen people. This great annual feast, was retrospective. It reminded the children of Israel that they had been saved through blood. It called the attention of the Israelites to their deliverance from Egyptian bondage by the blood of the paschal lamb and the mighty power of God. Moreover, the lamb which was slain for the Feast of the Passover typically and prophetically foreshadowed "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." John 1:29.

I. The Preparation. II Chronicles 35: 1-6.

King Josiah was very anxious that his people observe the Feast of the Passover in strict accordance with the manner in which it was originally intended that it should be done. He did not want the Passover to be observed according to his personal wishes or according to the conjecture of the court, but "according to the Word of the Lord."

In preparation for the celebration of the Passover, Josiah set the priests in their charges, commanded them for their diligence and faithfulness, and encouraged them to do their work in the manner which had been prescribed. He was very careful to have the priests in their proper places so that the entire service might be carried on with dignity.

Josiah caused the Levites to place the ark in the house, which Solomon the son of David king of Israel had built, where it fully belonged. For some cause the ark had been removed from the Temple, but the circumstances connected therewith are not clear. It may have been cast out during the critical days when one of the wicked idolaters was reigning, in order to make room for the idolatrous em-

Josiah wanted the Levites to know that they were required to render a service that was more important than merely carrying the ark. Carrying the ark under Divine commandment was an important service. But, all of us know that some work is more important than other. For them it was O. S. V. that they forego the privilege rendering the lowly service in order that they might devote time and talents to higher service. Such work as is done cheerfully and faithfully for God, in obedience to His commands, by His children will be acceptable to and appreciated by Him.

II. The Procedure. II Chronicles 35: 16-19.

Celebration of the Passover and observance of the feast of unleavened bread required a week. The children of Israel entered into the procedure with great zest and enjoyment. As they did so, they recalled the time when they were suffering people under the yoke of bondage to Egypt and how God had so graciously intervened and delivered them. From the standpoint of magnificence and the number of participants, this particular observance of the Passover was recognized as the greatest one ever held after the days of Samuel. What a joy and blessing when people worship God as He has directed. Any person does himself an irreparable injury if he does not make the most of his opportunities to worship God in spirit and in truth.

THE BOSS OF BROKEN SPUR

By Nick Summer

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

"WELL, RUSTY, you're on Broken Spur now."

"Mighty big country. Man could almost settle down here without feeling boxed in."

Kerry looked around him, seeing every side something that brought back happy memories.

His thoughts ate up the miles till he found himself in sight of the main house. His heart plunged down as he wondered what sort of reception he could expect. After all, he had no grounds for being sure Rob would want him back after the way he'd left.

The living-room was empty when he entered it, but he caught a crack of light under the door of the office beyond. He hesitated a moment, then, in a burst of impatience at his own chicken-heartedness, banged his knuckles on the door.

"No need to wake the dead! Come in!"

Rob was working over the ranch books and didn't bother to look up at first. Kerry stood in the doorway, watching the handsome, hawk-like profile, with his throat tight and his heart beating hard, till Rob raised his head and their eyes met and locked.

Kerry forced a smile to stiff lips, and flinched into his voice. "Well, Rob, the bad penny's turned up again—"

"Hello, kid." Quietly, almost casually, Rob shut the big account book and got to his feet. Kerry remembered Rusty's presence in back of him, and was grateful for the introductions that gave him something to bridge over this moment. After one of his swift, stinging looks, to which Rusty returned his slow smile, Rob said abruptly, "Come on in the living-room. I expect you'd like something to wash the dust out of your throats."

His hand touched Kerry's shoulder in a contact so brief it might have been an accident.

"You know what's going on here?" he demanded over the drinks.

"I met Sandy in Dodge. And a cowboy we ran into in Twin Forks told us about Larrabee getting shot and—the fool way Tim was taking it. Anything happened since?"

"Not to say, happened. I've heard talk. I don't know how much of it to believe. They say Larrabee's trying to organize the nesters for some kind of move on Broken Spur—him and that Bible-spouting old fire-eater, Nate Cullen. I doubt if any of the rest of them have nerve enough to do more than talk, but you never can tell. You staying?"

"If you'll have me."

"Don't talk like a fool, son. This is your home, isn't it?" Kerry

swallowed a sudden, uncalled-for lump in his throat.

Rob's black eyes travelled on to Rusty, and rested on him inquiringly.

"Rusty wants a job," Kerry volunteered. "He's a top hand. Good with horses. He—"

"He can probably speak up for himself."

"I need a job all right," Rusty confirmed. "And I can earn my keep. Only thing is, Mr. Mallory—"

"Never mind the Mr. Just call me Rob. Everybody else does."

"All right, Rob. Thing is, I oughta tell you before you turn me, I'm wanted for a damn back in Dodge—only I didn't do it."

"That's all right," Rob moved his shoulders impatiently. "I may be wanted for a couple of killings myself before this business is over. You understand you might be buying into trouble?"

"You saw, Kerry, Mr. Rob, he'll tell you trouble's sorta what you reckon it's no use a man tryin' to dodge what he's born to."

Rob nodded briefly. "Wages are forty a month—sixty if we run into shooting. You can show him where to bunk, Kerry. You'll start in the morning, patrolling the south range. That," he added with a wry smile, "is where your natural element is likely to start breaking, if it breaks. And Kerry, you might ride over to slash I tomorrow. Old Jared's been pretty sick. I haven't had time to ride over and inquire, and I'd like to know how he is."

"I'll do that," Kerry grinned. "I'd kind of like to know myself. Life was suddenly looking better than it had in a long time."

Kerry listened to the quick, clean tap-tap of Rusty's heels coming down the stairs, his heart beating in the same tempo. His eyes caught the swirl of her blue skirt, the little curves of her body under the sheath of cloth. Then she was in full view, her face beneath the shining coils of hair a little paler and graver than he remembered it, but just lovely. One minute they stood like that; then she spoke his name, and her voice told him all he needed to know. "Next minute she was clasped tight in his arms, and her lips were sending a wild sweetness through him that made him want to run to the top of the highest hill and shout his happiness to the four winds. All he could do was murmur, "Christie! Honey!" with his words smothered against her cheek, and pull her closer till she gasped, "Kerry, don't break my bones." Then he let her go to arm's length, and they looked at each other again and laughed out of the fullness of feeling crowding up in them.

"Oh, Kerry, Kerry, you crazy fool! Why do I love you like I do?"

"Just so you do, I'll let you figure out why. I've missed you."

"I'll bet you have—not one letter all this time."

"You know I'm no good at letters—and I wasn't even sure you'd want to hear from me. You were pretty mad at me when I went away, weren't you?"

"I reckon I was. I've been pretty mad the whole time you were away—mainly because you weren't around where I could have the satisfaction of telling you how mad I was!"

"Christie!" he urged. "Marry me right now!"

"This minute?"

"Well, tomorrow—or the day after. I'll even wait till next week if you want to make a big fuss over it," he laughed, "but as he saw no denial in her eyes. "But I don't even want to let you get away from me again."

A sound from the room overhead brought a shadow over the brightness of her face. "Kerry, I want to believe, I do—but I can't. I've got to stay with Dad—as long as I can." Her voice shook.

"Is it that bad, honey? I didn't know."

"Do, Haller says a few weeks—maybe not that long."

Kerry put his arm around her, and she leaned against him.

They stood for a little while in a silence that had no need of words; then she said, "Come on up and say hello to Dad. And don't let our notice how much he's changed."

Kerry needed the caution, for it gave him a profound shock to see the old man's face so sunken and waxy, and to hear the thready feebleness of that once booming voice. All through his long illness, Jared had seemed to retain something of his unquenchable vitality, along with his good looks. Now both were gone, and all that was left was his smile.

"Glad you're back, son. You been needed." He looked from one to the other of their faces, to Christie's right hand that was folded in Kerry's left, and repeated "Glad you're back," and Kerry felt as if he'd given them his blessing.

A horse drew up in front of the house, and he recognized Wayne Cameron's lean shape, getting down. Christie noticed, too, and said, "Let's go down. Dad's had enough company for one day." Or the way down, she explained "Dad's never liked Wayne. I don't know why."

East German
Reds Polite
To Adenauer

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent

The East German Communists are being very polite in West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer these days.

The newspapers in East German cities refer to him as "Herr Konrad Adenauer, chancellor of the Federal Republic."

Until recently, in the same newspapers, Adenauer was called "puppet," "war monger" and "imperialist lackey."

In fact, the Reds referred to Adenauer by these epithets as late as last Tuesday on their inside pages, that is, the first pages of some editions—lastly revised—reported the fact that Adenauer had been invited to Moscow.

What happened, it developed, was that the Kremlin had failed to notify the East German government and the East German Communist Party in advance that their arch-enemy's favor was to be courted.

East Germans Worried

This means that the East German leaders have good reason to be worried.

They undoubtedly have, as companions in misery, the Polish Communists.

It was suggested three weeks before the Kremlin invitation to Moscow that the Polish Reds probably were a worried bunch of people.

They must be more worried today.

There can be no doubt that the Soviet government would betray both the East German Communists and the Polish Communists if necessary to make a deal with Adenauer.

That betrayal would involve the unification of Germany and the restoration to Germany of the more than 40,000 square miles of its eastern territory which Red Poland now occupies.

Russia has almost got to make some kind of agreement with Adenauer, if only a face-saving one, for its own good.

It is inconceivable that Adenauer would agree to make Germany a neutral nation, as the Kremlin desires.

Against Accepted Facts

Even if Adenauer did agree to such an incredible concept, the facts of life would prove too strong to permit its consummation.

Germany is a world power, as much of a world power as Russia is. It can not be relegated to the status of a minor nation.

As long as Adenauer is chancellor, its alignment with the West seems certain.

Wilhelm Pieck, Otto Grotewohl and Walter Ulbricht, the East German big three, must be thinking of these things with some bitterness today, while Adenauer is in Washington.

They are puppets and lackeys of the Kremlin while Adenauer is the head of a sovereign nation and the honored guest of President Eisenhower.

Pieck is the president of the so-called German Democratic Republic. He is a figurehead. Grotewohl, as premier, heads the government. Ulbricht, the most hated man in Germany, is the head of the Communist Party and the real boss.

Berlin advisers suggest that all three Red leaders may go to Moscow soon to find just what the outlook is. It seems hardly likely that any news they get will be good.

FISHING
REPORTKnow Your Bait
By Ben Rovin

There were no entries in the Ledger and Times Fishing Contest this week. The recent rains and bad weather kept most fishermen off the lake, but those that had the nerve to get out generally came back to the docks with filled stringers.

Bill Nalt, down at the Kenlake Boat Dock says that largemouth bass continue to be the better fishing this week with the average string being of medium size. Although stringers are still being taken in large numbers, they appear to be on a slight decline as are crappie.

Bill lists of the following successful fishermen coming to his dock: N. T. Nuckols, Sr., N. T. Nuckols, Jr., and William Nuckols, all of Elkton, Kentucky, took 16 head of nice largemouth on "Dorret of Providence" took his Bass limit on fly-rod poppers. Limit stringers of large-mouth were taken on fly-rod poppers, by the following: Burble Knight, James Florence, Radford Connor, all of Hardin, Kentucky 1.

According to Nalt the water in the lake is dingy, the temperature is 72 degrees and catfish and bass fishing seem to be the best bet.

The report from Fisherman's One Stop, across the lake at Egner's Ferry Bridge gives the following success stories:

Myles Hale, of Covington, caught 15 catfish and two eels fishing with worms from their baited fishing dock.

Laud Jordan used a bass buzz to take 5 largemouth and minnows to catch 5 catfish at the same dock. John Hugg, of Paducah caught 33 crappie weighing up to 2 pounds on minnows in 15-20 feet of water fishing at the bridge pier.

Jessie Farrer and Bill Gill, of St. Louis, caught 17 stripe bass on minnows fishing at the bridge pier. Woodrow Keeney, of Afton, Mo., fished the same pier with worms to take 4 catfish and 4 W. H. Per. (Whatever they are).

Lee Sargent, of Evansville, caught 57 large mouth bass on a weeks fishing spree, most of them on Lucky 13's and Barton's spinner. Sargent fished around the bridge pier for his catch.

Gilbert Wintinger also of Evansville took 18 large mouth bass and stringers from along the shore near the Garcia Place on the lake.

A trio from Elkton, Ky., W. K. Settle, Col. W. S. Evans and C. E. Settle caught 18 large mouth bass fishing a Bamber along the bank.

Paul Gilliam, owner of Fisherman's One Stop says that "all fish have been very cooperative this week whenever the weather would permit the fishermen to get out. Rain and wind have been in effect most of the week. First May Fly swim came Thursday night and allowed us to really slay fish of all kinds."

To back up his statement the report contains the fact that Gilliam and his wife caught 20 bass, 30 stripes and 22 catfish and carry right off their dock while fishing with live May Flys.

Caiton Morgan and Elbert Massey fished last Tuesday for stripes around the island off Bailey Creek and got into several jumps. They used red and white spoons and Baby Pants Jigs to take their limit apiece of stripe bass.

Morgan said that they did not leave the store until 4:30 and could have done much better if they had had more time. The limit of one species of fish is enough for any man any day, else should be.

Most consider themselves lucky if they catch three or four fish in so short a time.

Remember to enter the fish you catch in the Big Ledger and Times Fishing Contest. You may be lucky in more ways than one.

Space Men

HOLLYWOOD — One of the victims Davy Crockett mowed down with his coonskin cap is a bright-faced young man who every Friday stands in line to collect his $30 unemployment insurance.

Until Davy began grinning bears to death on television, Lyn Osborn was Cadet Happy on "Space Patrol" and one of TV's biggest idols to children.

But "Space Patrol's" fickle fans decided to change headgear. The small fry junked their space helmets in favor of coonskin caps.

Today Cadet Happy's rocket ship, Toris V, stands dusty and unwanted in a scenery shed at ABC-TV studios—a symbol of the short life of a pint-sized TV viewer.

And Osborn, who was making $40,000 a year, is jobless.

But at the unemployment insurance office I stand behind some Rammer of the Jungle actors as Tim in good company, cracked Osborn today.

"And the line is loaded with old 'Space Patrol' heavies—villains from Jupiter and Saturn."

"Space Patrol" bit the dust 13 weeks ago because the sponsor wanted another type of show. Osborn thinks this had nothing to do with the switch to coonskin caps, but insiders at ABC-TV say otherwise.

Now Osborn is making the rounds of movie and TV producers to convince them he can do something else besides fly through space.

"I'd like to play heavies, psychopathic killers, maybe," he reflected. "I don't know whether to take advantage of my space character in getting jobs, or try to get away from it."

"Unfortunately, many producers don't think of me as an actor, but a space man. It's the influence of their kids."

JOSHUA KEEPS THE PASSOVER

The Passover was the most significant and meaningful of all the feasts or religious celebrations of God's chosen people. This great annual feast was retrospective. It reminded the children of Israel that they had been saved through blood. It called the attention of the Israelites to their deliverance from Egyptian bondage by the blood of the paschal lamb and the mighty power of God. Moreover, the lamb which was slain for the Feast of the Passover typically and prophetically foreshadowed "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." John 1:29.

I. The Preparation. II Chronicles 35: 1-6.

King Josiah was very anxious that his people observe the Feast of the Passover in strict accordance with the manner in which it was originally intended that it should be done. He did not want the Passover to be observed according to his personal wishes or according to the conjecture of the court, but "according to the Word of the Lord."

In preparation for the celebration of the Passover, Josiah set the priests in their charges, commanded them for their diligence and faithfulness and encouraged them to do their work in the manner which had been prescribed. He was very careful to have the priests in their proper places so that the entire service might be carried on with dignity.

Josiah wanted the Levites to place the ark in the temple which Solomon the son of David king of Israel had built, where it rightfully belonged. For some cause the ark had been removed from the temple, but the circumstances connected therewith are not clear. It may have been cast out during the critical days when one of the wicked idolaters was reigning, in order to make room for the idolatrous em-

commandment was an important service. But, all of us know that some work is more important than other. For them it was O. D. V. that they forego the privilege regarding the lowly service in order that they might devote time and talents to higher service. Such work as is done cheerfully and faithfully for God, in obedience to His commands, by His children will be acceptable to and appreciated by Him.

II. The Procedure. II Chronicles 35: 16-19.

Celebration of the Passover and observance of the feast of unleavened bread required a week. The children of Israel entered into the procedure with great zeal and enjoyment. As they did so, they recalled the time when they were suffering people under the yoke of bondage to Egypt and how God had so graciously intervened and delivered them. From the standpoint of magnificence and the number of participants, this particular observance of the Passover was recognized as the greatest one ever held after the days of Samuel. What a joy and blessing when people worship God as He has directed. Any person does himself an irreparable injury if he does not make the most of his opportunities to worship God in spirit and in truth.

Josiah wanted the Levites to know that they were required to render a service that was more important than merely carrying the ark. Carrying the ark under Divine

Development Of Boy Scout Reservation Is Good News

The announcement by the Executive Committee of the Four Rivers Boy Scout Council that plans have been drawn for the development of a year round reservation on Kentucky Lake for the Scouts of this area is good news indeed. Our Scouting program has been growing steadily for a number of years and now is more than our camp at Pakentue can handle.

There are many of us who will recall with pleasure many happy memories of days spent at Pakentue and for which there is a deep affection in our hearts. But it is time we realize that Pakentue cannot begin to provide all the camping facilities necessary to a well rounded Scout program. The men who have worked for two years in preparing plans for a new reservation at Kentucky Lake are to be commended for their foresight in making preparations to further spread the Scout program so that it will accommodate the nearly five thousand boys who are coming of Scouting age each year in our Council.

During the past two years, nearly one thousand Scouts have joined the program, making a total enrollment now of over three thousand. It is our understanding that there are many, many more who would join if there was room for them. It certainly seems to us that a place which can be used the year round is the logical answer.

Scouting represents something special in the life of every boy who is privileged to come into contact with it. It is a means of helping the home, the school, and the church build well rounded citizens who will someday take over the leadership of this area. Scouting instills a way of life and a philosophy of living that the boy may not recognize as such while he is enjoying the many new things which Scouting brings to him. But unmistakably, while no boy joins the Boy Scouts to have his character molded, it is an inevitable by-product that can do nothing but good for him and the following generation. As the Campaign progresses, we wish the public spirited men who organized it well; we hope they will succeed in carrying out their objective of providing an adequate, well-equipped reservation where our young citizens will learn democracy at work under the Boy Scout banner.
